

ST ANSELM 21 April

Consider, O my soul, and you, my inmost self, reflect, how much my entire being owes to Him.

In truth, O Lord, because you have made me, I owe my whole self to your love; because you have redeemed me, I owe my whole self; because you promise so much, I owe my whole self; no— I owe so much more than myself to your love as you are greater than I, for whom you gave yourself and continue to promise yourself.

Grant, O Lord, I beseech you, that I may taste by love what I taste by speculation, perceive by affection what I perceive by the understanding. I owe your more than my whole self; but I have no more than myself to give; nor even can I give my whole self to you without your aid. Draw me, or rather this whole self of mine, O Lord, into your love. All that I am is yours by creation; make it all yours by love. Behold, O Lord, my heart lies open before you it tries, but of itself it cannot; oh, do yourself what my heart cannot do. Admit me within the chamber of your love.

I ask, I seek, I knock. You who cause me to ask, cause me to receive. Thou give me to seek, give also what I am to find. You who teach how to knock, open to him that knocks. To whom do you ever give, if you say 'no' to him who asks? 'Who finds at all, if he that seeks seeks all in vain?' To whom do you ever open, if you shut the door to him that knocks? What do you give to him who does not pray, if you refuse your love to him who does pray? The de siring is from you; let me have the obtaining of it from you, too.

Cling to Him, O my soul; cling, cling with importunity.

Good Lord, good Lord, cast it not away; it faints of hunger for your love; revive it; let your sweet grace satiate it, and your unfailing fondness nourish it, and your divine love fulfil it, and occupy me altogether, and possess and fill me through and through; for you art with the Father and the Holy Ghost, God only blessed for ever and ever. Amen.
